

Your Global Research Partner

SECTOR
PAINTS & COATINGS

CLIENT
A Global Paint Manufacturer

GEOGRAPHIES COVERED
UNITED STATES

METHODOLOGY ADOPTED
Mixed methodology - online quantitative survey & in-depth interviews

MRPCHJ07012026P1

STUDY BACKGROUND

The client sought to understand consumer usage patterns, brand perceptions, and decision drivers within the architectural paints category. The study was designed to support product and portfolio planning initiatives.

BUSINESS OBJECTIVE

- Understand paint usage occasions and application behavior
- Evaluate brand perceptions and attribute associations
- Identify key decision drivers in brand selection

Homeowners and professional painters

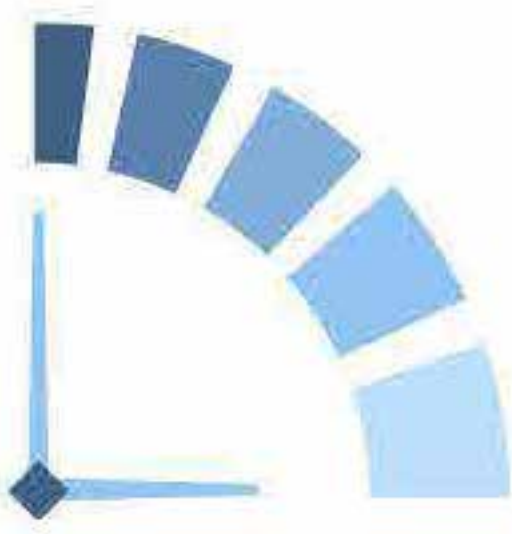

TARGET
RESPONDENT

RESEARCH OBJECTIVE

- Map consumer paint usage frequency and project types
- Measure brand imagery and functional perceptions
- Assess factors influencing brand choice

SAMPLE SIZE

300
respondents

5 Weeks

TIMELINE

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

This study was conducted to support a global paint manufacturer's understanding of consumer usage patterns and brand perceptions within the U.S. architectural paints market. The research captured insights across homeowners and professional painters, focusing on usage occasions, decision drivers, and brand imagery. A mixed-method approach combining quantitative surveys and in-depth interviews enabled comprehensive coverage of both behavioral and attitudinal dimensions, supporting informed portfolio and strategy planning.